

Good Taste

Food for thought from the Oxford American

THE OA'S WEEKLY WAY TO CONNECT THROUGH FOOD

In our Good Taste e-newsletter, Oxford American contributors write about what's on their tables and on their minds.

We'll share classics from the magazine's archive for contemplation and distraction and canvass our writers for favorite recipes, such as: Diane Roberts on her mother's sour cream pound cake ("a beautiful cake, nut-brown on the outside, yellow as a daffodil inside") and Ronni Lundy's chili bun and cornbread (crumble leftover cornbread into a tall glass of milk for a snack).

In these challenging times, we hope readers take comfort, joy, and pleasure in reading and cooking at home.

And we hope that you will share your unique offers with our audience as we continue to connect over food—even if only virtually for now.
